Buy Brains

No man can succeed without brains. The most successful man is he who having brains of his own also makes the best use of the brains of others.

When you buy the tools of your trade or profession you are availing yourself of other's brains.

As a lawyer, your tools are your law books. When you buy law books is it not the part of wisdom to buy those books into which the most brains have been put?

Suppose you are buying Reports. Some sets of reports are mere collections of opinions. The editor has simply printed and bound the brains of the court without adding any of his own.

Then there are annotated reports into which the editor has put not only the brains of the court but added some brains of his own in the shape of notes of more or less value.

And then there are "The Lawyer's Reports Annotated" in which the editors have added so much to the brains of the court in exhaustive notes as to make the set the ideal compendium of substantive law,—a collection of treatises founded on and illustrated by the great modern cases.

More money, time and brains are put into the preparation of L. R. A. Notes than into any other annotation or text work for which you are asked to spend your money.

That is what has made the set the most widely circulated of any set of reports ever published.

It takes a book of nearly 500 pages to index the notes in volumes 1-70 L. R. A. First Series. Gratis—you send the postage, 18 cents.

Select Essays in Anglo-American Legal History

By Various Authors

Compiled and Edited by a Committee of the Association of American Law Schools

In three octavo volumes, containing nearly 2,500 pages Bound in cloth. Subscription price for the set, $12.00

Vol. I. now ready; Vol. II. ready in 1908; Vol. III. ready in 1909

The volumes include Essays on almost all of the main subjects of law, covering also the general field of "Sources of the Law," "Law Reform," and "Colonial Law," and form substantially a supplement to Pollock & Maitland's "History of the English Law before the Time of Edward I." The wealth of material by writers of eminence and deep research, gathered in these volumes, and heretofore scattered in comparatively inaccessible volumes of periodicals, possesses a value which can hardly be overestimated.

The contributors to the three volumes include: Sir Frederick Pollock, Bart.; Hon. James Bryce, the late Frederic W. Maitland, Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes, jr.; the late Christopher C. Langdell of the Harvard University Law School, Charles McLean Andrews of Johns Hopkins University, John F. Dillon, Esq.; Prof. Heinrich Brunner of Berlin, Germany; the late James Bradley Thayer, Edward Jenks, Esq., of London; John Henry Wigmore, author of Wigmore on Evidence; Prof. James Barr Ames of the Harvard Law School, William Searle Holdsworth of St. John's College, Oxford, Eng.; Prof. Melville M. Bigelow of the Boston University Law School, Prof. Paul Samuel Reinsch, State University, Madison, Wis.; Prof. Joseph Henry Beale, jr., of the Harvard Law School; the late Sir James Fitzjames Stephens of London, Prof. Francis M. Burdick of Columbia University Law School, Prof. Samuel Williston of the Harvard Law School, Spencer Broadhurst, Esq., of London; Dr. Harold Dexter Hazeltine, Emmanuel College, England; Prof. John William Salmond of Victoria University College, Wellington, New Zealand; Edward Wyndham Hulme of the Library of the Patent Office, London; Prof. William Reynolds Vance of George Washington University, Washington, D. C.; Prof. Charles McGuffey Hepburn of the Indiana University Law School, and many others.

The committee to make the selection and prepare the volumes for publication consists of Professors Ernst Freund of the University of Chicago, William E. Mikell of the University of Pennsylvania, and John H. Wigmore of Northwestern University (Chairman).
